Directions on how to make and play the envelope activities are printed off when you print each game. The basic premise being that the student will say a target word/phrase/sentence (using the correct process or sound) before earning and putting a game piece in the slot of the envelope. Potential articulation and phonology sounds, words, and processes are customized per game allowing you to choose the most appropriate target for your students' individual needs. Instructions on play variations are also included to continually keep the activity captivating.

These activities work well in both individualized and group therapy sessions, as all students do not necessarily need to be working on the same sound, word, or process while being engaged in the same game at the same time. These activities also work well when you have a therapy group with various disorders because they tend to lend themselves to several types of therapy. Manila envelope games add a fun component to the therapy process that students look forward to each time they are used.
